

chart 14

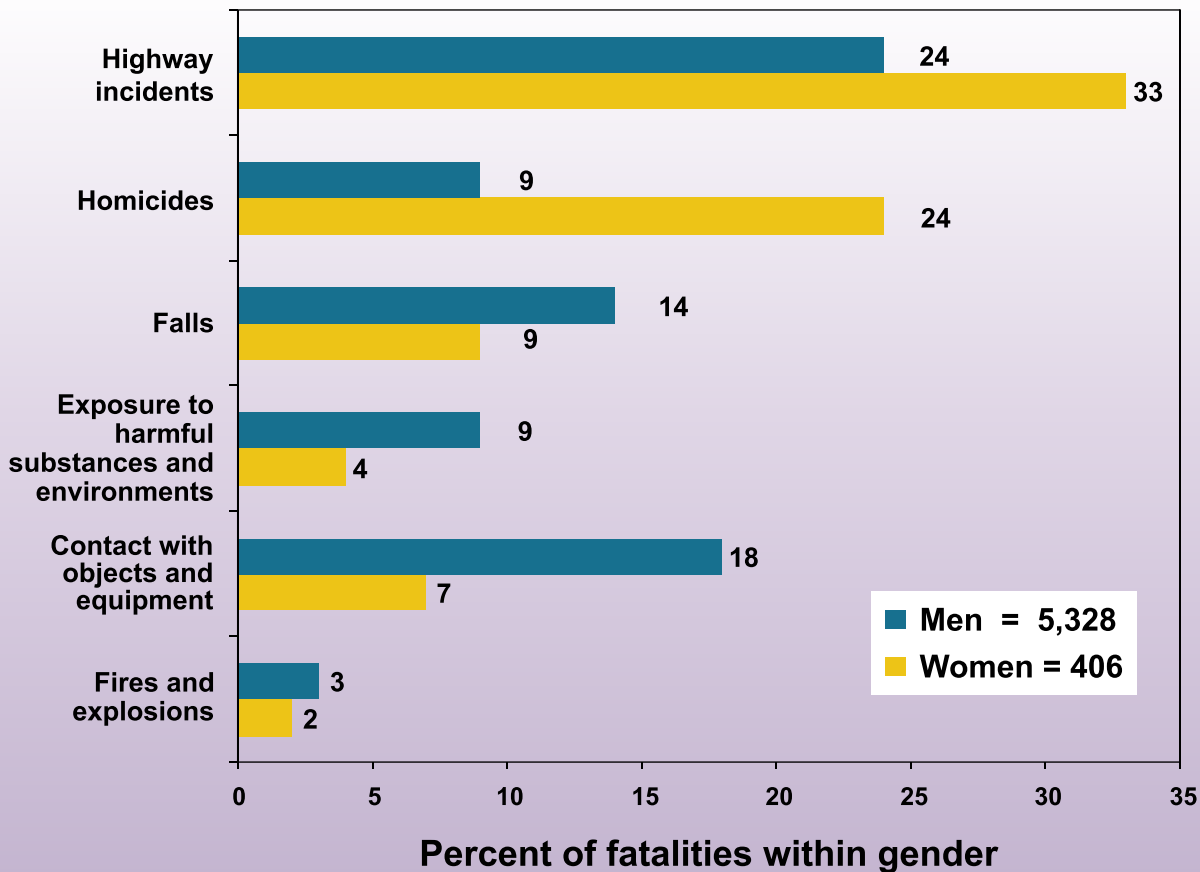

In addition to having fewer fatal work injuries than men relative to their share of employment, women experienced, for the most part, different types of fatal events than men.

Women had a higher percentage of fatal work injuries resulting from highway incidents and homicides.

Men had a higher percentage of fatal work injuries resulting from falls and from contact with objects and equipment.

Fatal injury events, by gender of worker, 2005

SOURCE: U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics, U.S. Department of Labor, 2007